Description:

This three-day multi-professional course is aimed at clinicians who are new to supervising any learner in the general practice / primary care setting. The emphasis will be on the knowledge and skills required to provide ad-hoc workplace supervision and/or formal clinical supervision. The importance of the multi-professional team and inter-professional learning and working will also be explored.

Indicative course content will include:

- Educational ideas that inform active learning
- Teaching methods
- Feedback skills
- Workplace and professional curricula
- Exploring professional identity
- Assessment principles
- Challenges in learning, teaching and assessment

Who can attend?

This course is multi-professional and is available to all supervisors / practice educators from across the professions in the general practice / primary care setting.

For GP educators who are required to complete training for GP educator approval processes, this course will be accepted as meeting the requirements for a clinical supervisor course.

Participants should be able to demonstrate:

- A substantive clinical role in the general practice / primary care setting
- Availability for all three course days (of the same cohort).
